The Rt Hon Rachel Reeves MP Chancellor of the Exchequer HM Treasury

11 December 2024

[Sent via email cc: The Rt Hon Bridget Philipson MP, Secretary of State for Education; The Rt Hon Baroness Smith of Malvern, Minister for Skills; The Rt Hon Wes Streeting MP, Secretary of State for Health; The Rt Hon Jonathan Reynolds, Secretary of State for Business and Trade; The Rt Hon Angela Rayner MP, Secretary of State for Housing, Communities and Local Government; The Rt Hon Lisa Nandy MP, Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport; and Richard Pennycook CBE, Interim Chair of Skills England]

Dear Chancellor,

RE: The defunding of level 7 apprenticeships

We are a group of 600+ employers, training providers, industry professionals and apprentices concerned about the impact of plans to defund level 7 apprenticeships on economic growth.

Increases in skill levels and high-skill occupations lead to employment and productivity growth. Level 7 apprenticeships are helping to provide the skills needed for occupations in growth-driving sectors outlined in 'Invest 2035' and to educate and train clinical staff and managers in the NHS.

The OBR forecast shows an approx. £800 million gap in 2024/25 between receipts from employer contributions to the levy and the apprenticeship programme budget - more than three times the cost of level 7 apprenticeships in 2023/24. These receipts should be strategically reinvested into the skills system. We are calling on you to increase the apprenticeships budget in line with the cost of funding level 7 apprenticeships in growth-driving sectors, high-potential SMEs and public services.

The first Skills England report makes a compelling case for why we must ensure that more people of all ages are fully active in the labour market and qualified throughout their career. This means boosting education and training opportunities for young people, whilst also addressing the need to upskill and retrain people already in the workforce, who will make up over 71% of jobs in 2035.

Creating the conditions to reverse low business investment in the UK, including the decline in employer expenditure on training, will take time and coordinated effort. In the meantime, delivering on the 'youth guarantee' by shifting and storing-up problems elsewhere in the skills system will not deliver the high-skill, high-productivity workforce the UK needs. The 'kickstarting economic growth' and 'opportunity' missions can and should be mutually reinforcing.

We know the Treasury will want to carefully consider the evidence for a return on investing employers' contributions in this way. Unfortunately, so far, this is a consequential decision that has lacked clarity and transparency. The Department for Education and Skills England should publish their rationale and evidence-base and then allow the time and process necessary for a range of stakeholders to provide expert analysis.

We hope you will work with us to look holistically at the potential impacts and unintended consequences of this policy and step-in to prevent it slowing down the growth agenda.

Yours sincerely,

Sample of testimonials

Over 400 signatories to the letter also provided a testimonial on the importance of level 7 apprenticeships. A selection of these is included below and all the testimonials can be found in the attached.

Health, social care and life science sectors

As someone working within the NHS, I strongly believe that Level 7 apprenticeships are pivotal to the development of our workforce. These programmes equip our senior staff and managers with advanced qualifications that directly enhance their leadership capabilities and decision-making skills, which are essential in a high-pressure, patient-centred environment.

In our organisation, the impact of these apprenticeships has been transformational. By offering senior team members access to structured learning while allowing them to continue their roles, we create a dynamic blend of academic knowledge and practical application. This not only ensures their growth but also fosters innovation and improved service delivery across our teams. Investing in our workforce through these apprenticeships has enabled us to build a pipeline of skilled, confident leaders who can adapt to the evolving demands of the healthcare sector. Moreover, this approach has proven effective in promoting staff retention and job satisfaction, as employees feel valued and supported in their career development.

Level 7 apprenticeships are crucial in addressing the current and future challenges within the NHS. They empower our managers with the tools to lead effectively and ensure that our teams are well-equipped to deliver the highest standards of care. For our organisation, these programmes represent not just an investment in individuals but in the overall quality of care we provide to our patients.

Hardip Dosanjh, Apprenticeship and Early Careers Manager, St Georges NHS Trust University Hospital

Level 7 apprenticeships are an essential to our charity and enable us to offer professional healthcare and leadership skills development that would otherwise need to be funded by taking funds directly from delivery of palliative care which we cannot afford to do. Removing this opportunity means we are unable to provide opportunity to drive inclusion and develop our talented staff.

Nerin Swanton, Learning and Development Manager, Sue Ryder

The Level 7 apprenticeship is a vital element in my everyday nursing practice. As a trainee I could simply not afford to self-fund the MSc in Advanced Clinical Practice and therefore, would lose out on my dream job role as an ACP. I believe if funding was cut short then the NHS would lose valuable trainee ACPs as they would face the same financial ties as myself.

Kaylee Lee, Trainee Surgical ACP, Wye Valley NHS Trust

Engineering, construction and the built environment sectors

Completing a Level 7 Leadership apprenticeship last year was a transformative experience for me, both personally and professionally. While I already held a bachelor's degree in motorsport engineering, I found that my formal education had reached its limit in terms of advancing my career. I sought an opportunity to make a greater impact at work, enhance my capabilities, and cultivate a high-performing team within my organisation.

This apprenticeship provided exactly that. Through an intensive programme of learning, feedback, and practical application, I was able to lead my team effectively, transforming it into a cohesive, high-functioning unit. The outcomes have been remarkable—not only has workplace efficiency improved, but my company has also recognised these achievements through pay rises for both myself and my team members. These improvements are critical in today's economic climate, where enhancing productivity is a national priority.

Importantly, this progress was made possible by the financial support available through government-funded apprenticeships. Without it, my company would not have been able to invest in my development. Instead of fostering internal growth and promoting from within, we might have been forced to hire additional staff, which often dilutes efficiency.

Continued support for apprenticeships is vital. These programmes do not just benefit individuals—they drive business success, reduce turnover, and promote engagement and career development, combating trends like quiet quitting. Investing in people, even those well into their careers, yields tangible benefits for companies, employees, and society at large.

John Farn-Ramsay, Principal Engineer Vehicle Dynamics, Group Lotus PLC (Former apprentice)

As a current Level 7 architectural apprentice I would be incredibly disappointed to see the funding for this scheme withdrawn. I take huge value from being able to learn alongside my work and feel this is vital in bridging the gap between theory and practice, particularly important in our push to decarbonise construction. I see no other opportunity for the groundbreaking thinking and research of universities to be fed so quickly and effectively into industry with the chance to work holistically to solve the real world problems that often impede the delivery of these kind of things.

The Level 7 apprenticeship funding offers an imperative opportunity for those from less wealthy backgrounds to train for high-skill jobs, without having to take extended periods away from work. Tom Perring, Architectural Assistant, Spratley & Partners (Current apprentice)

Level 7 Apprenticeships are fundamental to our business in pipelining the skills we need to deliver NetZero projects for our clients in the Utilities and Infrastructure space. There is a skills shortage with gaps which can be addressed at the right academic level required to deliver client requirements through level 7 apprenticeships.

L7 apprenticeships with the right accreditations allow us to develop talent with the chartered membership level status the clients need in tenders to secure long-term frameworks to deliver critical projects for UK infrastructure in line with ambitious NetZero goals.

Joanna Middleton, Head of Talent Acquisition, Dalcour Maclaren

As the Professional Body for Town Planners, the Royal Town Planning Institute is deeply concerned with the proposed Government reforms to the funding of L7 apprenticeships. The Chartered Town Planner degree apprenticeship is an L7 apprenticeship which provides an excellent pipeline of qualified town planners into an already under resourced sector which will be significantly impacted by the suggested funding reforms.

This Government is driving forward a growth strategy and has already identified the key role that planners play in delivering this mission and to remove levy funding will result in the demise of this apprenticeship, cutting off the pipeline of much needed resource in the sector.

In the Autumn Budget it was announced that the Government would support 300 new planners into the planning system. The Chartered Town Planner apprenticeship is a vehicle through which a capacity boost can be delivered. With up to 70% of those studying the Chartered Town Planner apprenticeship working and training in Local Government, without access to levy funding they will not be able to train and enter the planning workforce.

Dr Victoria Hills, Chief Executive, Royal Town Planning Institute

We are a very small practice (<5) and have for the last four years taken on recent graduates as employees. This has been great for the practice, and good for me as practice owner in giving something back to the profession. It is not without its pitfalls, however, one of those being that staff leave after a year to continue their education in working towards qualification. Having explored Level 7 Apprenticeships with one of our employees (who decided against it due to losing face-to-face teaching because of Covid), we made future staff aware we were prepared to support them with this route to qualification. One of our employees has just started his Apprenticeship having been with us for 9 months. I think it is fair to say that he is not from a privileged background and is pleased to be able to work whilst studying towards qualification as an architect.

I'm equally impressed that as a small practice, we have help in funding in the form of the levy, allowing us to give young staff the well-rounded experience we have become known for. We also have some continuity in staffing, which is both good for the practice and great for staff as they can see a project through from inception to completion.

Without the assistance of the levy, we would certainly not be in a position to offer this as a route to qualification within the practice.

Allister Godfrey, Director, Allister Godfrey Architects (First-time employer of level 7 apprentice)

My apprenticeship was a transformative chapter in my life, laying the foundation for both personal and professional growth. It provided a unique opportunity to blend hands-on experience with structured learning, bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and real-world application. Through this apprenticeship, I gained not only technical skills but also critical soft skills such as communication, time management, and problem-solving.

One of the most valuable aspects was the mentorship I received. Working closely with experienced professionals allowed me to learn directly from their expertise and gain insights that no textbook could provide. Their guidance helped me navigate challenges, understand industry standards, and refine my craft. This collaborative environment encouraged me to ask questions, embrace feedback, and continuously improve.

The apprenticeship also taught me the value of hard work and resilience. Juggling responsibilities while learning new skills demanded dedication, but it was incredibly rewarding to see my contributions recognized and impactful. It wasn't just about acquiring a skillset—it was about building confidence in my ability to contribute meaningfully to my field.

Moreover, this experience opened doors to networking opportunities and future career prospects. It allowed me to prove myself in a professional setting, ultimately leading to a full-time role in the industry. Beyond the career benefits, my apprenticeship instilled a deep sense of pride and accomplishment. In hindsight, my apprenticeship was not just a step forward; it was a launchpad. It gave me direction, purpose, and the tools to thrive in my career. I am deeply grateful for the experience.

Tyler Scott, Architectural Assistant, CMS Architects (Current apprentice)

I am signing this letter in support of the continuation of the Level 7 Ecologist Apprenticeship. A thriving ecological sector is essential to achieving the government's environmental targets and supports key industries such as construction, particularly following the implementation of mandatory biodiversity net gain in February 2024. The sector is currently experiencing significant skills and capacity shortages, particularly in senior roles where Level 7 apprenticeships can make a meaningful difference. Without levy funding, most employers in the sector would be unable to fully finance these apprenticeships, making the continuation of this standard critical to upskilling the workforce and meeting growing demand.

Brian Heppenstall, Education and Careers Manager, Chartered Institute of Ecology and Environmental Management

Manufacturing

As a small business we are currently investing in level 6 apprentices which is a significant commitment to developing young talent within our industry. In the absence of level 7 funding, I am concerned that exceptional talent potential will be curtailed when our current and future apprentices reach the end of their level 6. This will also limit our ability to offer level 7 to our more experienced employees who may wish to develop their careers within our business.

Richard Day, Managing Director, Essex Scientific Laboratory Supplies Limited

Our industrial members cover a wide range of sector, size, location and activity. We have levy paying medium and large companies as well as many small businesses that are exempt. However, across the board they are all seeking skilled engineers, scientists, technicians and rely on strong management and leadership to develop and grow their business. They recruit and develop at all levels and all ages, including Level 7.

We also have University members, who are both providers and receivers of Level 7 Apprenticeships. In addition to the funding gap created by an immigration policy that has vastly reduced the number of overseas students, a decrease in revenue through Level 7 apprenticeships would further worsen this situation. The risk is that reduced capacity for provision would impede the opportunity for potential apprentices from all sectors.

Reducing funding for Level 7 Apprenticeships would lead directly to a reduction in their uptake and provision, perpetuating the leadership and management skills gap and hampering one of the key government missions: Growth.

Steve Brambley, Chief Executive, GAMBICA

Digita

Level 7 apprenticeships have enabled our company to take great early career people and accelerate them to be amazing in areas such as accounting, engineering and leadership, and solving big problems in the UK space sector. Without the levy we would never have been able to fund this.

Carl Andersen, Head of Learning and Development, Viasat

Creative and cultural industries

The L7 Library, Information and Knowledge Management Professional apprenticeship is of real importance to the Bodleian Libraries. We see it as an opportunity to create career pathways in our organisation by recruiting and upskilling existing staff and increasing diversity in our organisation.

Laura How, Chief Operating Officer, Bodleian Libraries, University of Oxford

Local government

Level 7 apprenticeships enable us to create a talent pipeline in hard-to-recruit areas like law and planning. They enable us to develop our staff and retain them in the organisation, allowing those who have been unable to afford to go to university to gain professional qualifications. As a local authority with an increasingly restricted budget, we simply do not have money to fund such qualifications outside of the Levy, so the removal of L7 Levy funding would shut off this access to professional careers.

Karen Arnold, Apprenticeship & Development Coordinator, Buckinghamshire Council

I'm from a working-class background and grew up on a council estate. I went to inner London state schools. I went to work at 16 and did not have the chance to obtain a degree at school age. This has been a hurdle for me in recent years trying to break through the glass ceiling into senior management where degrees are expected as minimum requirements for most roles. The apprenticeship scheme has given me the chance to obtain a nationally recognised qualification, receive some fantastic training and mentoring and has given me huge confidence at work to speak with (now qualified) opinions.

I'm confident this will also aid me in future promotion prospects when I feel ready to move on. I honestly cannot speak highly enough of the apprenticeship scheme in giving me - at 43 years of age - the chance to rectify this disadvantage and obtain a substation qualification. Our organisation, like many, does not have the money to send employees on this course otherwise so if the funding was cut it would see an end to senior management development and the knock-on benefits to other employees and the residents we serve.

Chris McAvoy, Head of Community Safety and Enforcement, London Borough of Havering (Former apprentice)

Level 7 apprenticeships are vital to both individual growth and organisational success. For me personally, participating in a Level 7 apprenticeship has enhanced my strategic and leadership skills, enabling me to drive meaningful change in my organisation. The blend of academic rigor and practical application has been invaluable, allowing me to implement cost-saving initiatives and improve operational efficiency, directly contributing to organisational goals.

These programmes are also critical for addressing broader challenges, such as skills shortages and social mobility. By providing opportunities to professionals from diverse and underrepresented backgrounds, they foster inclusion and help build a highly skilled workforce. In my experience, they fill a critical gap in sectors like healthcare and public services, where budgets for training and development are often limited.

Moreover, Level 7 apprenticeships deliver excellent value for money. They maximise the potential of the apprenticeship levy, ensuring investment in upskilling the workforce and boosting productivity. Removing funding for these programs would risk halting progress on key priorities, such as economic growth, workforce resilience, and social equality.

I strongly believe that Level 7 apprenticeships are a cornerstone of professional development and organisational innovation, and I urge policymakers to continue supporting them. Donna Hesabi, Procurement Manager, Royal Borough of Kensington and Chelsea

Education sector and training providers

Level 7 apprenticeships are pivotal for the UK's industries (in particular the creative, cultural, heritage and art industries). Apprenticeships offer advanced and specialised in work training that addresses skill gaps, promotes professional development, and supports individuals career advancement. Apprenticeship programmes are vital for developing high-level skills needed for senior roles that align with specific industry needs. They enhance career progression which also fosters a diverse and inclusive workforce.

The proposed levy cut to Level 7 apprenticeships will lead to significant skill shortages, hinder Creative Industry growth (which has a target of +£50B by 2030 with 1M new workers), and limit access to advanced training, particularly for individuals from disadvantaged backgrounds.

A cut to the apprenticeship levy, such as the one proposed would have far-reaching negative consequences, including an economic impact and reduced opportunities for highly skilled professionals, and will undermine the planned growth and the UK's innovation potential.

*Professor Kieren Reed. Professor of Fine Art, UCL Slade School of Fine Art

The provision of Level 7 apprenticeships is key to the delivery of the Government's five missions and economic growth. Any industrial strategy must include the enhancement of leadership and management skills, the lack of which is a longstanding drag on national productivity.

The skills that employers require are commonly at Level 7 and removing the opportunity for employers to use the Levy to fund Level 7 skills would serve to perpetuate this skill gap. For example, at Middlesex University 92% of our current Senior Leader apprenticeship intake are from public sector employers, primarily the NHS. The delivery of effective public services requires the funding of Level 7 apprenticeships including Advanced Clinical Practitioners, Doctors and yes Senior Leaders. Employers will not prioritise the development much needed Level 7 skills unless this is supported through the Levy and the under-investment in skills development by UK employers will not be addressed.

As co-chair of the Higher Education (HE) Employer Trailblazer Group, I know that the skills needs of employers in this sector are primarily at Level 7, for example, the Academic Professional apprenticeship standard. The removal of the opportunity for HE employers to use their Levy to develop the Level 7 skills they need, will close the door on a key means to invest in staff and impede strategic planning at a time of financial crisis for the sector.

Professor Darryll Bravenboer, Director of Apprenticeships, Middlesex University (Co-chair of the Higher Education Employer Trailblazer Group)

Additional sectors

Level 7 apprenticeships are vital to BSI as they enable the organisation to develop high-level expertise and leadership capabilities among employees while aligning with strategic goals. These advanced programmes offer industry-relevant skills and knowledge, fostering innovation, driving performance, and ensuring BSI remains competitive in a rapidly evolving global market. By investing in Level 7 apprenticeships, BSI not only supports the professional growth of its workforce but also reinforces its commitment to excellence and continuous improvement, creating a sustainable pipeline of future leaders and experts.

Leah Fisher, People Development Advisor, BSI (Current apprentice)

As a Project Manager at IBM, I've experienced firsthand the value of continuous professional development, especially in leadership. The Level 7 Senior Leader Apprenticeship from the Open University offers a unique opportunity to blend academic studies with practical application, enabling me to grow as a leader and deliver greater value to my clients. This apprenticeship goes beyond traditional learning by providing the opportunity to develop knowledge, skills, and behaviours through showcases and end-point assessments. These structured milestones challenge me to undertake experiences and reflect on capabilities I might not normally explore in my day-to-day role. This process has been instrumental in shaping my ability to think strategically, lead effectively, and inspire others, helping me grow into a more capable and confident senior leader.

Matthew Royle, Project Manager, IBM (Current apprentice)
